Destination Block Island: Tourism and Community in a Historic Place

Pack your bags! The 26th Annual Rhode Island Statewide Historic Preservation Conference is headed overseas. Twelve miles off the mainland, Block Island beckons as both a historic vacation spot and a tight-knit community. Grand hotels, well-preserved summer cottages, walking trails, historic sites, and attractive beaches appeal to visitors. Meanwhile locals keep the businesses humming, preserve local landmarks, and conserve open space — more than 43% of the island is protected. Whether you are an islander or a mainlander, you won't want to miss the chance to explore Block Island from a historic preservation perspective.

The 2011 conference will showcase preservation issues pertinent both to Block Island and to other communities around the state. Discuss efforts to install windmills in historic places, to preserve underwater shipwrecks, and to operate historic hotels. Don't miss the opportunity to tour what the Nature Conservancy called one of the “last great places” in the Western Hemisphere. Field trips will sample the island's landscapes and architecture. Destinations include conservation land and farms, resort hotels and summer cottages, and the island's two treasured lighthouses, from North to Southeast.

This year, we invite you to spend the day — or two or three. On Friday, April 29, attend “Portraying Place, Preserving Place: A Block Island Conversation” to discuss the island's visual character. On Saturday, April 30, participate in the many tours and sessions presented at the conference. On Sunday, May 1, explore the island on your own, or seek out some of the additional activities being offered.

Or you might just want to stay the whole year. Rhode Island's preservation conference is but one event in a year-long celebration of Block Island's 350th anniversary. In 1661, sixteen families from Massachusetts arrived on the North End of the island — near Settlers' Rock (erected 1911). The Town's Block Island 350th Anniversary Committee is coordinating a calendar of special events that features a celebration of Founders Day on Saturday, June 18. Portraying Place, Preserving Place: A Block Island Conversation

Gretchen Dow Simpson, Artist

Gerald Abbott, President of Block Island Historical Society and Southeast Lighthouse Foundation

Edward F. Sanderson, Rhode Island State Historic Preservation Officer, RIHPHC

Twenty-five years ago, the Southeast Lighthouse Foundation was founded to raise awareness and funds to move the endangered landmark back from the eroding Mohegan Bluffs. Advocate Gerald Abbott engaged his friend Gretchen Dow Simpson to create an image for a poster to assist the ongoing rescue campaign. The lighthouse was saved and restored, and Gretchen's depictions of local subjects continue to express the visual character of Block Island.

Portraying Place, Preserving Place is an illustrated conversation between an artist, an advocate, and a statewide preservation leader. Together, they will discuss the interplay of visual expression, personal experience, and historical context in perceiving and expressing Block Island's unique sense of place. Educated at the Rhode Island School of Design, artist Gretchen Dow Simpson is best known for her distinctive views of New England architecture and landscapes, with many individual works that depict Block Island's vernacular buildings. A radiologist by trade, Gerald Abbott spearheaded the successful campaign to save and restore Southeast Lighthouse and is active in numerous Block Island historic preservation projects. Edward F. Sanderson has served as the executive director of the Rhode Island Historic Preservation and Heritage Commission since 1984 and was recently appointed the State Historic Preservation Officer of Rhode Island.

The Opening Conversation is presented by the Southeast Lighthouse Foundation, RIHPHC, and Block Island 350th Anniversary Committee. The event is sponsored by the Rhode Island Council for the Humanities.

A1 Rugged and Refined: An Island's Story

Gerald Abbott, President, Block Island Historical Society and Southeast Lighthouse Foundation

Discover the story of Block Island's past three and a half centuries as you view historic photographs, maps, ledgers, handwritten letters, and drawings. The island's early European residents were farmers first, then fishermen. Beginning in the mid-19th century, Block Island became a leading summer resort. From the unique dialect ("par is a-mowing; we are a-going") to the dramatic rescue of the Southeast Lighthouse, this presentation covers the sights, sounds, and stories of Block Island.

A2 Block Island Archaeology: Pre-Contact Indian Settlements and the Pequot War

Kevin McBride, Director of Research, Mashantucket Pequot Museum & Research Center

Paul Robinson, Principal Archaeologist, RIHPHC

The Pequot War of 1636-1638 included dozens of battles and actions between the Pequot Confederacy and the English and their Indian allies in Connecticut, Rhode Island, and eastern New York. One of the first conflicts took place on Block Island at Crescent Beach and the Great Salt Pond, near settlements that Indian people had used for thousands of years. Hear about the research funded by the American Battlefield Protection Program, on this early colonial period war and the pre-contact use of the land by Indian people.

A3 Advocacy 101: How to Make Friends and Influence People to Make Great Preservation Decisions

Kari Lang, Executive Director, West Broadway Neighborhood Association

David Riley, Co-Chair, Head of the Bay Gateway

Valerie Talmage, Executive Director, Preserve Rhode Island

Today's preservation programs evolved from a grassroots movement where citizens took action to stop two federally supported programs that were devastating to the fabric of communities—the interstate highway program and urban renewal. Since those days, preservationists have advocated for (and against) countless projects, legislation, and funding. Whether promoting funding or laws, programs or projects, and whether at the federal, state or local level, successful advocacy requires both strategy and execution. Learn tips and tools from experienced winners and sharpen your advocacy skills.

Session A

10:30am – noon

A4 Nice Work If You Can Get It: Preserving Historic Leisure Venues

Renee Gamba, Director, Museum of Natural History at Roger Williams Park

Eric Hertfelder, Executive Director, Fort Adams Trust

Roberta Randall, Principal Historic Architect, RIHPHC

Martha Werenfels, AIA, LEED AP, Principal, Durkee, Brown, Viveiros & Werenfels Architects

Leisure tourism has long been one of Rhode Island's leading industries; however, operating a historic destination is no picnic. This panel will showcase recent projects at historic attractions — the wide-ranging master plan for Fort Adams, the stunning restoration of the Newport Casino Theatre, and the ongoing renovations at the Museum of Natural History in Roger Williams Park. Hear from stewards and consultants who ensure that Rhode Island's historic destinations remain engaging, secure, and relevant to future audiences. Presented by AIA/RI.

A5 Hotel Hop WALKING TOUR

Virginia Hesse, Principal Historic Architect, RIHPHC

Local hotel owners and managers

Block Island's collection of working historic seaside resort hotels is unrivaled in New England or most anywhere else. Beginning in the 1850s with a few hotels and guest houses, the resort business boomed following the construction of the Old Harbor breakwater (1870-76) which allowed visiting steamships to berth. This long walk will begin at the Surf Hotel (1873+) and work its way south to visit the National Hotel (1903), Hotel Manisses (1876), 1661 Inn (1888), and sites of hotels long past en route to the Spring House Hotel (1852+).

NOTE: All tours include a healthy amount of walking outdoors.

A6 Old Harbor Historic District WALKING TOUR

Martha Ball, Vice-Chair, New Shoreham Historic District Commission
William Penn, Chair, New Shoreham Historic District Commission

The Old Harbor Historic District was listed on the National Register of Historic Places in 1974, and New Shoreham made it a local historic district in 1982. Thanks to this dual designation, preservation activity includes state and federal tax credit projects like the rehabilitations of the National Hotel, Hotel Manisses, Mitchell Cottage, Blue Dory Inn, and others, as well as many projects reviewed locally. Take a walk with local historic district commissioners to learn firsthand about the special character of the Old Harbor Historic District and what it takes to preserve it.

A7 BI-cycle BICYCLE TOUR

James and Elizabeth Bailey, Volunteers, Block Island Historical Society
Jeffrey Emidy, Project Review Coordinator, RIHPHC

For 300 years, Block Island was a self-sufficient world apart. Islanders fished, farmed, dug their own heating fuel, piloted boats up the bay to Providence, claimed the contents of shipwrecks, and welcomed visitors to this summer vacation mecca. There is no better way to sense this unique social history than on a bicycle. Hilly this island may be – we will drive you and your bike to the top of Pilot Hill to start, so do not fret. Bring your own bike, lock, and helmet, and we will secure them after your tour. WEATHER PERMITTING. Same route as B7.

A8 Around the Block: History BUS AND WALKING TOUR

Pam Gasner, Executive Director, Block Island Historical Society

Did you know that the oldest European settlement on Block Island is not Old Harbor – or for that matter, New Harbor – but the quiet intersection of Old Town Road and Center Road in the center of the island? Tour many landmarks of Block Island’s development, from the colonial village center to the 19th-century harbors and from the farms and fields to the resort hotels and summer cottages.

Session A

10:30am – noon

A9 Conserving Historic Landscapes: Lewis-Dickens Farm BUS AND WALKING TOUR

Scott Comings, Block Island Director, The Nature Conservancy

Step back in time to see what Block Island looked like 250 years ago. This nature preserve includes acres of meadows and miles of stone walls. Buildings on site include barns built of salvaged shipwrecks and a replica of the house of Elizabeth Dickens (1877-1963) who taught local children about bird-watching and helped to inspire an island-wide conservation movement. Learn about Miss Dickens and the Lewis family and how their legacy set an example for additional land conservation projects.

A10 Southeast Light BUS AND WALKING TOUR

Lisa Nolan, Executive Director, Southeast Lighthouse Foundation

Southeast Light (1873-74) was erected to guide vessels around the dangerous shoals and ledges off Block Island's southeast coast. By 1983, when it seemed that the lighthouse itself needed saving, the Block Island Historical Society launched a campaign to move the building inland from an eroding bluff and to restore the lighthouse as a historic site. This visit will explore the lighthouse tower and attached keeper's house, reflect on the historic relocation, and discuss plans to establish a museum of maritime history with a bed and breakfast suite on site.

A11 North Light BUS AND WALKING TOUR

Members of the North Light Commission

Built in 1867, North Light is the fourth lighthouse to stand on Block Island's North End. This granite edifice marks the entrances to Block Island Sound and Long Island Sound and deters mariners from treacherous Sandy Point. Visit the lighthouse with members of the North Light Commission and admire the recent restoration of the historic iron lantern. NOTE: this tour includes 40 minutes of walking along a sandy beach.

B1 You Are There: Block Island History Show

Martha Ball, Board Member, Block Island Historical Society

Take a seat for this slideshow tour of local history and architecture, from the 1870s when Block Island first opened the door to tourism through the early 1900s — with some more contemporary views in the mix. This presentation shares the perspective of a life-long Block Islander on local lore and special places. Her materials include historic photographs, vintage postcards, and old advertisements.

B2 A Bride in the Barn: Special Events in Historic Places

Janet Zwolinski Firenze, Executive Director, Mount Hope Farm

Joan Kelly, Site Manager for Eisenhower House, RIHPHC

Susan Whitney, Executive Director, Old Slater Mill Association

Theresa Woodmansee, Preservation Consultant

What do brides and CEOs have in common? A desire to hold their important events in beautiful, comfortable, and memorable historic places. Meet the newly appointed executive directors of two important historic sites, and learn how they are developing new strategies to attract event rentals while upholding their missions to preserve and interpret. And hear the perspective of a veteran site manager on ten years of operating a Newport venue, from balky boilers to stunning sunsets.

B3 Introduction to Grant Writing

Dyan Vaughan, Independent Grant Consultant

Especially for historic organizations — this workshop will begin with a discussion of optimal organizational structures and program design for successful grant writing. A professional grant consultant will explain methods of researching potential funding sources as well as general grant writing techniques. This session is ideal for volunteers or board members of nonprofit organizations with little or no grant writing experience.

Session B

1:30 – 2:45pm

B4 Not Your Grandparents' Windmills: Siting Modern Wind Turbines in a Historic State

Virginia Adams, Senior Architectural Historian, Public Archaeology Laboratory
Rick Greenwood, Deputy Director, RIHPHC
Charlotte Taylor, Senior Archaeologist, RIHPHC

The growing importance of wind power as an energy resource has prompted the need to develop effective methods for addressing the potential effects of wind turbines on historic resources. Review the preservation issues associated with wind turbines, including the identification and protection of marine and terrestrial archaeological sites as well as visually sensitive historic landscapes. Then discuss installations and proposed projects in North Kingstown and Tiverton, on Aquidneck Island, and off the Block Island coast.

B5 Hotel Hop WALKING TOUR

Pam Gasner, Executive Director, Block Island Historical Society
Sarah Zurier, Special Projects Coordinator, RIHPHC
Local hotel owners and managers

See description for A5; this tour will walk from south to north.

B6 Old Harbor WALKING TOUR

Peter Greenman, Volunteer, Block Island Historical Society

Block Island's "downtown" doesn't have a single traffic light, but there are many stories to tell about its developmental history, distinctive architecture, and local characters. As you stroll Old Harbor, learn about Nicholas Ball's vision for a manmade harbor and its impact on island development. The tour will visit historic hotels, commercial buildings, houses, and churches, and more contemporary structures — and share historic photographs of what used to be. To extend the tour, sign up for C6.

B7 BI-cycle BICYCLE TOUR

James and Elizabeth Bailey, Volunteers, Block Island Historical Society
Roberta Randall, Principal Historic Architect, RIHPHC

This tour repeats the route of A7.

B8 Around the Block: Conservation and Preservation BUS AND WALKING TOUR*

Keith Lang, Executive Director, The Champlin Foundations
Edward F. Sanderson, Executive Director, RIHPHC

On Block Island, it is not just 43% of the land that is protected. Animals and plants are protected. Landscapes are protected. Views, buildings, structures, and island character are protected. Make the circuit around the island, and stop for walks at the Hodge Family Wildlife Preserve and Rodman’s Hollow. As you gaze towards North Light from a stop on the Hodge Trail, consider how land conservation and historic preservation efforts team up to safeguard Block Island’s unique sense of place. This tour is 3 hours long —with a lot of walking

B9 Green Gambols: Greenway BUS AND WALKING TOUR*

Scott Comings, Block Island Director, The Nature Conservancy
Paul Robinson, Principal Archaeologist, RIHPHC

Inspired by England’s Greenway trail system, the Block Island Greenway covers more than twelve miles of trails on conservation land in the southern part of the island. Although this walk will cover some challenging terrain, the sites and the sights are well worth the effort. Learn about how the Greenway was created as you amble past Block Island School, the historic one-room Gully School, Payne Farm, Indian Cemetery, Smilin’ Through cottage, and Rodman’s Hollow. This tour is 3 hours long —with a lot of walking

1:30 – 4:30pm

B10 Lights Fantastic: North Light and Southeast Light BUS AND WALKING TOUR

Gerald Abbott, President, Southeast Lighthouse Foundation and Block Island Historical Society

Lisa Nolan, Executive Director, Southeast Lighthouse Foundation

Members of the North Light Commission

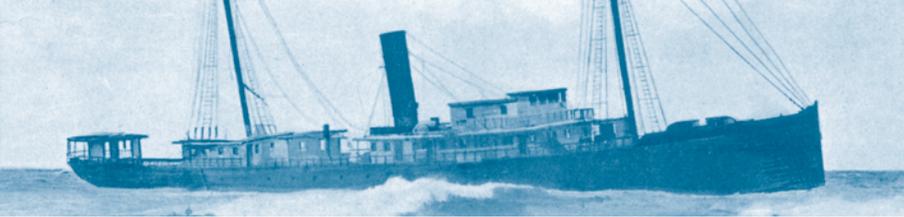

Block Island's two historic lighthouses are tangible reminders of the island's nautical history and important assets for heritage tourism. Its cast-iron lantern recently restored and relit, North Light (1867) is a museum powered by a windmill and solar panels. Southeast Lighthouse (1873-74) was dramatically relocated from an eroding bluff in 1993 and is presently undergoing restoration to include a maritime history museum and a bed-and-breakfast suite. Visit the two landmarks with some of the people who make them shine so brightly. This tour is three hours long and includes 40 minutes of walking along a sandy beach.

B11 Block Island Houses BUS AND WALKING TOUR

Mack Woodward, Architectural Historian, RIHPHC

10

Because of its size, natural resources, and remote setting, Block Island possesses a residential architecture perhaps more specifically local than that of any other Rhode Island community. This island-ranging tour will include very rare examples of early houses, several view-oriented summer places from the late 19th and early 20th centuries, and compelling modern additions from the most recent building boom. This tour is three hours long and includes several opportunities to explore sites on foot.

C1 Spotlight on the North Light

Rob Gilpin, Chair, North Light Commission

From the comfort of your seat, revisit the recent award-winning restoration of North Light's tower and roof. Before: rusted metal, deteriorated hardware, and missing components. During: planning, design, and a thorough refurbishment at a Massachusetts ironworks. After: a re-secured lantern holding the historic lens and lamp, relit at a community ceremony in fall 2010. Also: a discussion of renewable energy installations at historic structures and private aid to navigation. No walking required!

C2 Heritage on Holiday: Block Island's Historic Hotels

Dick Brush, Dean of The Hospitality College, Johnson & Wales University

Steve Draper, Owner, The 1661 Inn and Hotel Manisses

Virginia Hesse, Principal Historic Architect, RIHPHC

In the late 19th and early 20th centuries, thousands of tourists visited the coastal communities of Watch Hill, Narragansett Pier, Newport, and Block Island to enjoy the sand, surf, and sea air. This influx gave rise to a flourishing resort hotel industry. While most of Rhode Island's Victorian hotels were lost to floods, fire, and development, Block Island remains a time capsule of that lost era. This session brings together hotel owners and a hospitality specialist to share perspectives on Block Island's reputation as a destination where historic hotels are a prime attraction.

C3 Drowned Lands and Shipwrecks: The Underwater Cultural Resources of Rhode Island

Rod Mather, Professor of History, URI

Charlotte Taylor, Archaeologist, RIHPHC

Rhode Island has more shipwrecks per square mile than any other state, but shipwrecks are not the state's only underwater cultural resources. During the last ice age, dry land was exposed past Block Island—land where the ancestors of the Narragansett Tribe might have lived. This session will discuss the search for ancient sites flooded by rising sea levels when the glaciers melted, Block Island's especially rich history of marine peril, and the search for some of Rhode Island's most significant shipwrecks—the British Revolutionary War fleet sunk off Newport.

C4 Extending the Boundaries: Local Preservation outside of Historic Districts

Rick Greenwood, Deputy Director, RIHPHC

William J. Penn, Chair, New Shoreham Historic District Commission

Valerie Talmage, Executive Director, Preserve Rhode Island

Traditional historic districts do a good job of preserving historic buildings that are concentrated in cohesive villages or neighborhoods, but what about the many farms, country houses, and other historic properties that stand alone? This session explores current efforts on Block Island and elsewhere to tailor established methods including historic district zoning and preservation easements to preserve a community's independent historic buildings.

C5 The Island's Attic: Block Island Historical Society TOUR

Pam Gasner, Executive Director, Block Island Historical Society

Greetings from Woonsocket House. Built as a boarding house for vacationing residents of its namesake city around 1871-73, it has served as headquarters of the Block Island Historical Society since 1945. Tour the extensive collection of artifacts relating to the island's history of seafaring, agriculture, leisure, and daily life. And discuss the challenges of using and interpreting a historic property as a community history museum.

C6 Old Harbor TOUR

Peter Greenman, Volunteer, Block Island Historical Society

See description for B6; this tour extends the walk to additional sites.

Lunch

noon – 1:30pm

Closing Receptions

4:30 – 6:00pm

At Lunch

Step back in time to enjoy lunch at one of three historic hotels on Block Island: the Spring House Hotel, Hotel Manisses, or the 1661 Inn. Hotel owners and managers will offer brief optional tours during the lunch period. Your lunch location will be assigned based on your choice for the B session.

Opened in 1852, the Spring House Hotel is sited on a promontory overlooking the Atlantic Ocean. The oldest surviving Block Island hotel, it has a bracketed wraparound veranda and mansard roof with cupola.

The Hotel Manisses (formerly Littlefield House) was one of the first hotels to open following the construction of the Old Harbor breakwater in 1870-76. The restoration of the mansard-roof building was one of Block Island's first historic preservation tax credit projects.

The original part of the 1661 Inn may have been built in the late 1700s as a small private house. It became a boarding house in the 19th century and was known as Florida House from the 1920s until it was purchased and renovated by the Abrams family in 1969.

Closing Receptions

Join us to catch up on the day's events and network with colleagues by land or by sea. For those travelling back to Point Judith at the end of the day, the Closing Reception will take place on board the ferry. For those staying on the island, the Closing Reception will take place at the Hotel Manisses.
